Dear Mr Martin

I'm writing to share my thoughts and impressions of the Sunset Meadows housing project. To begin with, as currently designed it looks hardly better than low cost military barracks. There are three straight rows of housing with limited access for residents to move from the north side of the project to the south. Space should be left for bike and walking paths between the structures.

Perhaps the developers could be encouraged to use more open spaces to break up the monotony of straight rows of housing. Where landscaping could be used to add beauty and character to this very boring housing project. Beauty and character the people of Sisters care deeply about.

Finally, since this is the first visual impression visitors arriving from Hwy 242 will have of Sisters we should want to put our best foot forward and make sure this housing project makes a positive impression on those that both visit and call Sisters home.

Respectfully submitted,
David Chinburg
